

of Captain, director of the "Warplane Model Club" at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan, U.S.A.

I write you on behalf of an air-minded community, made up of our club, who are deeply concerned over the possibility that the supply of material necessary to build model airplanes may be cut off.

It seems imperative to me that any restrictions on the maximum amount of materials necessary for model airplane building should even be considered since the aviation knowledge our air-minded youth has obtained through this activity has in countless instances proved to be of definite value to our country and war effort.

I say this from personal knowledge. My activities in encouraging model building dates back to 1915, and during this period my boys have gone north from school into
